Welk was raised in a German-speaking hamlet in North Dakota, and did not learn English until he was 21, accounting for his distinctive accent. He began performing professionally at the age of 13, playing the accordion. After leaving high school, he went into music full-time, eventually forming two groups, the Biggest Little Band in America and the Hotsy-Totsy Boys. The Lawrence Welk Show was a staple of ABC for many years, but the network dropped the show in the 1970s because programmers thought its audience was too old. Welk promptly signed a lucrative syndication contract and went right on producing the show for a number of years thereafter, with even greater financial reward. Welk established a retirement resort outside San Diego, Lawrence Welk Village, which is now home to many of his fans.
