Barbara Ann Mandrell (born December 25, 1948 in Houston, Texas) is an American country music singer. She is known for a series of Top 10 hits and TV shows in the 1970s and 1980s that helped her become one of country's most successful female vocalists of that period. She was inducted into the Country Music Hall of Fame in 2009.

The eldest daughter of a musical family, Mandrell was already reading music and playing accordion at age 5. Six years later, she had become so adept at playing steel guitar that her father took her to a music trade convention in Chicago, where her talents caught the attention of Chet Atkins and Joe Maphis. Soon after, she became a featured performer in Maphis' Las Vegas nightclub show, followed by tours with Red Foley, Tex Ritter, and Johnny Cash. Her network TV debut came on the NBC-TV series Five Star Jubilee in 1961.

While growing up, Mandrell learned to play the pedal steel and lap steel guitars and many other instruments, including the accordion, saxophone and banjo. She played steel guitar for the legendary Patsy Cline, who once wrote to a friend that Mandrell was, "a 13-year-old blonde doll who plays the steel guitar out of this world! What a show woman!" Mandrell toured at age 13 with Cline, Johnny Cash, and George Jones. A couple of years later, Mandrell and her sisters Louise and Irlene, as well as her parents, founded the Mandrell Family Band. They toured across the United States and Asia. Their drummer, Ken Dudney, became Mandrell's husband shortly after she graduated from Oceanside High School.

Dudney later enlisted in the Navy, serving as a pilot, and was sent overseas. Mandrell decided that she would become a country singer and moved to Nashville. Her father was then her manager and with his help, she signed with Columbia Records in 1969. Mandrell's first releases earned respect from her country peers, but her first big breakthrough with fans came in 1973 with the single "The Midnight Oil"; it was the first song that was sung from the perspective of the woman who is doing the cheating, which at the time was unheard of. In 1980 Mandrell became the third woman to win the "Entertainer of the Year" award from the Country Music Association. She repeated history in 1981 by winning the award for the second time. This was unprecedented.

A collection of duets with Lee Greenwood, Meant for Each Other, followed in 1984 but then, just as she was at the peak of popularity, she had a major setback when she was involved in a very serious automobile accident, sustaining multiple fractures and a severe concussion that caused temporary memory loss, confusion and speech difficulties. After a year-and-a-half of rehabilitation, she recovered and returned to recording and performing.

With Ken Dudney, Mandrell had three children: her oldest son spent many years as a gourmet chef in Nashville, her daughter Jaime was Miss Tennessee Teen USA in 1993 and Miss Golden Globe in 1996. The youngest son Nathan graduated from the University of Mississippi.
